General Information:

The Entry Commission will transfer a permit to a surviving spouse unless you have expressed a contrary intent in a will that is probated. You can use this form to designate a person to receive your permit after your death if the following criteria is met: you have a transferable limited entry permit or a pending application; you do not have a surviving spouse at the time of your death; and you have not expressed a contrary intent in a will.

The identity of the person designated on this form is confidential information while the permit holder is alive. The recipient may apply for the permit transfer 90 days after the permit holder's death by submitting a completed Request for Permanent Transfer by Designation Recipient Upon Death of Permit Holder form, a copy of the permit holder's death certificate, and copy of the will (if a will exists).

The recipient will not receive a plastic permit card unless he/she certifies their present ability and intent to participate in the fishery. The recipient may emergency transfer the permit for three years after the permit holder's death.

Special note for naming minors: If the recipient is a minor, seventeen years old or younger, the minor may not permanently transfer the permit away unless the minor's transfer is approved by a court. The minor will receive title to the permit but not a plastic permit card until the minor has reached the age of presumptive ability to participate (ten years old for set net and sixteen years old for most other fisheries); unless the minor can demonstrate the present ability and intent to participate in the fishery. At the discretion of the Entry Commission, the minor can transfer the permit in an emergency basis until they reach the age of presumptive ability to participate.
